

Dangerous Dogs Fact Sheet – QLD

The Animal Management (Cats & Dogs) Act 2008(QLD) demands that all dog owners of declared dangerous dogs, declared menacing dogs and restricted dogs must comply with legislation requirements or face a court imposed fine for each offense.

Below are a few facts to act as a guide for a dog owner in QLD if they have a restricted dog breed or a declared dangerous dog.

What is a Dangerous Dog?

Any dog can be dangerous. The Act defines 3 types of dangerous dogs:

- Dangerous Dog
- Menacing Dog
- Restricted Dogs

What Breeds are Restricted?

- dogo Argentino
- fila Brasileiro
- Japanese tosa
- American pit bull terrier
- Pit bull terrier
- Perro de Presa Canario
- Dingo

Can I Breed my Pit Bull Terrier?

All restricted dog breeds are required to be desexed and tattooed. If you have a restricted breed dog, it is compulsory that you notify your local council of it.

Can I use my old Dog House?

The Act lists down several requirements for proper enclosure of a regulated dog. Unless your dog house complies with the act then no, you cannot.

How are Dogs Declared Dangerous or Menacing?

Any breed of dog can be declared dangerous if they:

- Cause injury or damage by an attack on a person, animal or vehicle.
- The dog has repeatedly or shown a tendency to attack.
- The dog attacks or chases a person, animal or vehicle even without causing injury or damage.

How do I Identify a Dangerous Dog?

The main identifier of a Dangerous Dog, Menacing Dog or a Restricted Dog is a custom disc shaped dog tag with the words "Regulated Dog" engraved on it. The tag is required by the Act to be at least 25mm in diameter, have a yellow background and must be made of metal or plastic. Other than this, a Dog Muzzle and Leash is required to be worn by the regulated dog at all times when in public and is being handled by a capable adult at least 18 years of age.
